- CISMS II

We have been conducting this international project since 2005 in conjunction with 25 other academic institutions. Its goal is to examine in further depth the key cultural differences within the work-family conflict in the various countries and thus contribute to the integration process of different collectives, expatriates or immigrants.

- Project 3535

A large-scale international project focusing on studying the work-family conflict in a multicultural and interdisciplinary way, while also including both macro and micro components. This project has been underway for three years now.

- IFREI

IESE's Family-Responsible Employer Index is a study whose first edition was launched in Spain in 1999. It is currently being developed in Europe, Latin America, and other countries around the world.
